

BIBLE SEMINARY HOAX!

Yes, it's true; the makeshift bible school is just another tool of deception, bondage and extortion. At the time of leaving, the bible school was not accredited, but Denis was talking about trying to make it so. Now mind you, they could have done this many years ago if they really wanted to, but there is no way that Denis will ever allow anyone outside of the disorganization to come and teach classes like English, Math, music and so forth (which you must have to be accredited). I'm sure if he hasn't by now figured out loop holes or suckered someone who has actual teaching credentials, he will.

Why did he have a change of heart? Why would he even look into changing the school in such a way? Well, you see, Denis began to realize that all of the money that the brother/soldiers were getting from the GI Bill, could significantly add to the collection plate. He figured, why let them continue to pay all this money to a real college when the church could get it all? Let's see what all of this means in terms of income for the church.

Tithe:

- GI Bill + kicker
- Housing
- FASFA (financial aid)

Other:

- Cost of classes

You might be saying, "Rev Bowers, I still don't get it, what does all this mean?" Well today is your lucky day, because I feel like explaining myself. This is how it works; normally, a school gets their cut of the GI Bill for class fees and the student gets the rest, less the cost of books and other needed materials. Now, if the HOPCC school takes the accreditation route, then guess who gets all of the Tuition, and plus money for the books? If you said, "The church," then you're absolutely, 100% correct. And here you thought your pastor was trying to do you a favor. Believe me, each and every one of them want bible colleges at their local church because of the extra money generated. It gets even deeper than that. For those who qualify for the housing, the church also gets that money, by moving them into one of their overly crowded, fire hazard, non-privacy properties. But they've been doing that part for years already, and not just in Hinesville Ga.

The dilemma they are facing is this; They can either keep their inferior version of a bible college, which means that they could have whoever they wanted as teachers, no matter their experience and or credentials. Or allow outside sources to get involved and make it a "true" school of learning.

I distinctly remember the pastors going back and trying to promote this “Accredited” garbage, the members were just like, “Oh praise the L... whatever.” This is because the people knew that it all meant tighter and stricter controls. If the school were to be accredited, that would mean no more going to the local college to take online courses. That time could now be spent “Soul winning.”

AS A MATTER OF “FACT”

Fact: Denis/Pastors could care less about any of the members furthering their education, a degree would do nothing more than “Make them proud.”

Fact: The teachers have no training, no experience and no degrees. I know, I know, “The Holy Ghost,” right? They will say that you don’t even need a stupid degree because it’s just a piece of paper anyway. But you do need to know how to interact with people without annoying, pastoring, or belittling them, when teaching. If you have a degree, and you’re reading this, don’t teach there, they just want to use you anyhow.

Fact: In bible school, the students never receive any quizzes or test back, nor do they receive a grade for the class, because the pastor says it will make them proud. Today’s word is “Makeshift” boys and girls.

Fact: The sole purpose of the bible school is to bring in more income to the church and its pastor, not to make preachers who will go forth into the harvest field. Denis said so himself, that the vision is not to build more churches like NTCC did, but that’s because he doesn’t want to deal with anymore boneheaded pastors that he has to continually take by the hand.

Fact: using the GI bill for the members was nothing more than a way to make money. Proof, ask anyone who gets 100% disability already; how many degrees that they received after attending college for three years. The sad truth to this one is; there are some who have to get a job after their GI Bill runs out and their left with no additional skills to put on the resume because they never even graduated. There is no wisdom in that, at all.

Fact: Most wives are doing their husband’s GI Bill school work for them, and they don’t want to, but are forced to do so.

Fact: Bible college notes are plagiarized. The teacher gets a packet of printed notes that are photo copied from a book. The only way a student will ever get anything from any of these teachers is if they have time and grade in the ministry, and at that, most will preach instead of teach.

Fact: Many of the students either didn’t care or didn’t have time to do their assignments. After each of the classes I taught, there would be given a reading assignment to complete, which was due the next class. Generally it was a few chapters, nothing big or overly zealous on my part. You would be absolutely amazed at how many students failed to complete this simple assignment.
