

THE PHONE CALL

It's been almost two years now since we were rebuked and sent on our way, and all of the sudden, I'm getting phone calls from the pastors. Bellamy calls several times in succession, and then the HOPCC trinity calls me; Figoaway, Pukeington, Dare defy me Denis (Figueroa, Pilkington, Denis). Fig was the one who called and the others were on stand-by in the background waiting to let me have it. No thank you, trying to cut down on false accusations and manmade rebukes. You had your chance to talk things out years ago Denis, but you didn't want that. You see, evil got the best of him and now the giant sickle has begun its process of reaping what he has sown many years ago. See, the bible is right, "You will reap what you sow." To man's eyes your sins may be well hidden, but to God, he sees it all. I think the word they like to use is "Transparent."

Fig was trying to be real nice and polite to me in his phone message, gee, I wonder why? "Hello sir this is brother Figueroa, when you get a chance give me a call, thank you sir." Please, please, just stop! Don't worry; I will not be getting that chance to call you, "Sir." If I had a list of a million people to call, your name would be somewhere near one million. What words could you possibly have to say to me? I'm sure that this discussion was not going to be a public confession and apology for the past wrong that was to done to all the members who were dejected.

Bellamy calls and leaves the message, "Bowers, Bowers this is Bellamy, call me? Uhh, no! Poor man didn't know how to even leave a message without stuttering; and what a shame, no brother, no reverend, just "Bowers." Even though I realize he's just playing the part, he's still a fool! What he should have said was, Philip, (It's OK to call me by my first name), you were right, but I have to call you and trick you up because Denis told me to, even though you were right about my daughters.

I actually told Bellamy a year and a half ago what was going to happen with his children, and sure enough, it has finally come to pass. He allowed his daughters to be sacrificed to Molech (Denis). It looks like idolatry is rampant in St. Louis because the Patterson's did the exact same thing. Come on Mike and Janice, seriously? Why? Yes, I do realize that I am telling their business, but it's so prevalent right now, that everyone already knows, and just about everyone continues to buy into this "God said," "Pastor said" thing. It really makes me wonder just how many of the members actually believe this junk.

Hasn't anyone taken notice to the constant bad advice given by the pastors on a daily basis? I know you won't agree with everything he says, but my goodness, was it really God who said to marry that newly divorced woman? I said it before and I'll say it again, if the pastor told the members to jump off the roof, there would be a bunch of people with broken bones in the next service.

If I'm wrong about this, "God forgive me," but if you're wrong, then, "God forgive you." Because if you allow your daughter to prematurely get married so they can be a piece of meat to a hormone motivated juvenile, there will be severe consequences that follow. Yes, they are hormone motivated, because Denis fills their minds with that sexual junk all the time. Don't believe me, then ask the teen boys what Denis talks to them about. Oh, and you thought it was just scriptures and bible college, "Wrong." Now I'm talking crazy right? But if I'm that crazy and that much of a sinner, then why continue reading these articles? If I don't tell it, then who will? Most everyone has moved on with their lives, with no immediate interest to involve themselves with the HOPCC antics. But there are some who are stepping forward up to the plate, and making a stand against the evil.

But what about the call? What if God is calling them to get married or join the ministry? Correct me if I'm wrong, but don't most if not all (probably all now, since the introduction of the $2400 GI Bill clause) of the churches already have a bible seminary on location? And is everyone's future mate in one location? This is too obvious people, the work of God, NO! The work of man, Yes! There is a difference between the "Ministry" and "Mindistry"

So you think I'm wrong on this? OK then why are all, I mean every single one of the teens getting taken to one place? There is no way that anyone on this planet can tell me that this is the will of God for a man to send his teenage children across the country to live with someone else. As Virgo would say, "I'm convinced" that this is another authentic "Lie." Just like I don't believe that it was Gods will for these children to be taken from their parents, I similarly don't believe that this is a "Hush hush topic." I guarantee there are parents who are members, dreading the day that Deity Denis calls for their children to be sacrificed.

And now back to the phone call . . . I never picked up the phone because I already know they don't want to hear anything I have to say, and I'm sure they would tell me I'm going to hell for the web site, pride, fighting God....and so on and so forth.

There really is nothing else they can say; On the day of my release, Denis rebuked me for 15-20 minutes straight, after prayer meeting, as Pilkington and a sister (I don't want to say her name here) just stood there and watched. He began making a slew of false accusations directed toward me, and that was me standing there two feet away from him live and in person, so imagine what he would have said on the phone. If someone can lie about you, while talking to you face to face, then what are they going to say with the cover of 100 miles and a cell phone? I really do wonder what he was about to say on the phone, "Not really?" If anyone actually thinks their intentions were anything but evil, I beg to differ.

After months of plotting against me, and executing their ultimate plan of dismissal, they tried to pull a Pilate "And wash their hands of the sins they committed." Sir, repentance doesn't work that way. They know what the truth is, both about us and what's currently going on in the church. I actually do know why they were trying to get in touch with me, because another brother and his wife left the church.

See, it's not a big deal when they kick the "Unwanted members" out but there is a problem when the "Wanted members" leave. Beating them at their own game, and getting the upper hand over the "Apostle" himself; that's definitely grounds for dismissal. The only problem is, they already dismissed me, so now what do they do? I guarantee they are kicking themselves now, and wishing that they would have just done things differently with me. Not in a million years did they think I would be the one who would challenge them at their own game, but I did.

In fact, initially I did just stay away. I didn't call anyone, I didn't say anything about the whole incident when I saw members, there was no web site, and really no interest in even helping people escape from them. If one must know, I really didn't know what was going on myself, Denis literally just came out of nowhere, and showed up after Thursday prayer meeting to hand me my death sentence. Any wind that I had in my sail, he definitely took it and left me stranded in the ocean. But what he didn't know was; unlike many of the others that he chased away and left marooned, my wife and I didn't crash into the reefs of life. It was like being dehydrated in the middle of the salty ocean, plenty of water, but none that could be consumed.

It was by the grace of God that I didn't totally lose all of my bearings; being without food, money, a job and a vehicle, spelled certain disaster for anyone. Many times things are preached about God being a provider, and looking out for his people, but it wasn't till this happened that I really understood it. I'm not going to sit here and tell you that my faith was through the roof and everything was a breeze, because it wasn't. The whole thing was extremely painful and stressful.

By the way, I still have the same number I did back when I was in the church, and we can talk anytime you want. But if you call trying to set me up with the pastors on the other line, then I will hang up. What I have to say is right here online, there is no need for me to prove anything, to anyone, because ultimately God knows, and I sleep really good these days knowing that I am not alone. I also sleep good because I now have time to get actual rest for my body instead of "Run here and run there," "Do this and do that."

I figured to just keep moving forward with my life, in actuality there really was nothing else to do. I needed a job like yesterday, because I was counting on the income from the church to help pay my rent and other bills. Interesting enough, that money was supposed to have come on Friday morning; just one day away, via bro Felder. I believe that was also planned, for Denis so show up the day before I received finances from the church. Evil showed up right on time for me not to have money for rent.

Oh, and speaking of brother Felder, just ask him if I stole any of the church offerings; as Pilkington says I did. He was in charge of all the finances in the church, so he would know. Go ahead, just ask him, "Say brother Felder, did Rev Bowers ever steal any of the churches offering?" Funny thing that is; me, I'm the thief, but all Will-I-AM ever did was steal from the people. He takes their time, money, life, children, mindbut I'm the thief? He even tries to steal the show when members aren't singing, preaching, leading service correctly; he will interrupt the service and replace the brother or sister with usually himself, or another. I wonder where he got the gumption to do that. I know I saw someone else do that before, but who? Even in the sinner court of law, a person is said to have allegedly committed a particular breach of the law, but not in HOPPCC; you are guilty by way of insanityno that's not right, you're guilty until proven more guilty. If the pastor says, then it is so. Never mind the other side of the story, never mind the proper protocol of the bible, and never mind what God deals with you about personally; none of that holds true in the church court of law. No wonder Christians take each other to court, because the church is a law unto itself, making it up as they see fit. How did I get all of this out of a few phone calls, I really don't know but pray for me.
