

The Irony of it all

I find it ironic how that so many see all of these things going on in the church, all the lies that Denis spreads, and the true nature of the HOPCC pastors; but yet, so many still disagree with what's been said here on this site. One person says, "God is moving and blessing," while another says, "God has left the church, and services are pointless," so which is it?

I believe most see and know, but may not quite understand why it's happening or even what to do about it. Some have chosen to stick it out and see what happens next, hoping for things to change, while others have chosen to "Lay low" off the radar as best they can, biding their time to execute a plan of escape. Oh, there is another group; those who will not leave no matter how broke they are, what they see, hear, and what is done to them.

Unfortunately I was in the latter group, destined to stay with the HOPCC organization till I died a physical death or the rapture took place. I would have to say I was in the first group for some time, seeing everything going on and all, but nothing could ever make me leave, I was loyal to the organization, Denis, ministry, soul winning, everything!

In actuality, it turned out to be a good thing in the long run when they discarded my wife and I. Yes, I was one of those "Lifers," bound by some of everything, and everyone, never truly finding myself or identity even till the end. But I said nothing, and did everything.

My question is; when will the rest of the people stop pretending like nothing is going on? Though I don't believe that there will ever be a "Perfect" church, HOPCC far exceeds what I believe to be a disaster of a church, possibly one of the worse places a member can find themselves. We need to stop acting as though none of what I've stated and what sooooo many others have agreed on, is nonexistent. Members continue to see the gross atrocities committed by these pastors, and they continually excuse it, buy yet, post comments on this site portraying that myself and others have no idea what we're talking about, as if these things have never and are not happening.

Let's not be delusional, HOPCC is a hurtful, stressful, unexciting, downer of an organization that does not in any way exercise even the basic principles of Christianity, love and leadership. Denis keeps trying to promote that he has some "Prophetic" ministry that everyone needs, but he's washed up and "Pathetic." Yes! That's your pastor that I'm talking about, no one on this end is afraid of him or the other pastors for that matter. All that prayer they teach you, how about using it, because I know that I do to help expose them for the charlatans (Noun: person who pretends or claims to have more knowledge or skill than he or she possesses; quack. Synonyms: impostor, mountebank, fraud, fake, phony) they really are.

I wonder when people will realize that they are messed up because the church they attend is messed up. Too many members are blaming themselves for what has and is happening, "Stop that!" You are not to blame; it is the constant undue pressure causing stress and anxiety that these pastors are putting you through.

Think about it, if you like the church so much, then why even come to this site to begin with? Why are you so curious to hear and read what I have to say? Are you looking for a comment from someone you know? Don't kid yourself; you know how you feel when the pastor finds a reason to pick on you and correct you every day. He does it because his pastor does it to him, so naturally you will reciprocate what comes down hill and stops at the dung hill. My goodness that's worse than being at home with a drunken parent cursing and threatening to beat you up. At least you can call the police to come and take them away, but in HOPCC you have no one in your corner. Did you know! That your pastor gets rebuked every time he does something wrong and it's found out? When a "Faithful" member leaves the church that could have been prevented, you guessed it, he gets rebuked.

The very next day you must see him at prayer meeting. Look! There he is now; you better turn the internet off on your phone before you get caught and sternly rebuked. Make sure you come back to read the rest after 11 o'clock tonight when you finally get home from “Doing the Lords work.” Sigh! You’re pretty beat aren’t you? I wonder, just what kind of an impact are you really making? Just think about the people’s lives you are about to influence when you invite them to “Your church.” You’d better be sure that you know what you’re involved in before you involve someone else in it.

Anything Denis had in the form of a ministry is long gone and many years in the past. I guess members want to overlook all the sins that he's committing, but that will come to a halt once he involves them, and destroys their marriage, takes their money, and moves them from state to state, year after year.

I understand that there are "Newer" member who visit this site, and don't quite understand everything that's going on as of yet, but in due time that too will change. Please everyone reading this and attending HOPCC do yourself a favor, and put some money away, stop going to those worthless conferences, and just stay home with your family for the week, it will do you some good. I know the pastor will tell you to hold down the fort, but in actuality, there is nothing to hold onto. If it were me, that's when I'd be planning my escape.

All liars have their place in the lake of fire and that includes so-called preachers, apostles and teachers that profess the name of Christ, but have neither the mind nor the love of the one they are pretending to worship. True worship is done in spirit and in truth; vain repetition is a true sign of a hireling. There are member stating that their HOPCC pastor is a man of God, full of the Holy Ghost, but yet so many others are crying out for help and vindication. If God truly is the sponsor of the HOPCC movement, then why are so many wanting to move away from them instead of move closer to them?

Why is it that everyone leaves that church on a “Bad note,” and labeled a sinner, homosexual, independent, child molesting buffoon? Interesting to note that the former member was a good Christian, who gave everything that they had and even what they didn’t have when they were involved in the church. But after the smoke cleared and the cover-ups began, all of the sudden he/she was the worst individual on the planet that was nothing more than a problem personified in the form of a person.

These bunch of money hungry, power frenzied men who you all call a “Pastor,” are nothing more than a confused child who has lost their way, and unfortunately it’s the broad way, with Denis leading the front.

If you think they care about what’s going on in the church, then ask them about why certain people left, I guarantee you’ll get the whole “They were disobedient” speech, then get shooed off. Tell them you’ve been on this site and ask if any of it is true about what they did to countless people. Ask him if he lies, ask him if he’s happy, ask him if he’s his brother’s keeper and ask him if he loves you. That’s a lot to ask, what’s wrong, are you afraid?

I’m not telling you to do this but; I double dare any member in the Killeen church to ask one simple question: “Why didn’t we pray for the Bowers when they left?” Mind you, this isn’t all about me and my problems with the church, but I want you to see for yourself the change in expression Pilkington will have when you bring up the subject.

Thing is, when others leave the church; speaking of those who just don’t want to be there versus kicked out, all the members will be told to pray for them in soul winning meeting. Right or wrong! They will be called, checked on, and the soul winner told what scriptures to say should they actually find that person in question. I distinctly remember a particular brother that they had me and another brother go and look for at his job which was ½ hour away and in the middle of the night.

Bottom line: If they kick you out, nothing will be said, only cover-ups if anyone inquires of your whereabouts. Denis has gotten so good at this, that he can kick people out right in the middle of service, literally stop preaching, rebuke, dismiss, and continue the message. Now should you leave because you are sick and tired of it all (the norm), then be prepared to be hunted down and scripted to death (that is until you’ve had enough).

These pastors always ask the members personal questions, so why would it be unfair to ask the same of them? Let me guess; “That’s out of order” and that’s exactly why the pastors do what they want, when they want, and to whom they want. I guess you're going to believe that you will go to the lake of fire for that one also? Hogwash!

The bible says a pastor should be "Blameless."

Now mind you, under normal circumstances, questioning the pastor would be out of the question. His life should speak volumes, and the spirit should bear witness of his true devotion and desire. God still honors "Godliness," not a form of it. If you are in a constant mindset of questioning, then you need to find the source of these questions to get some answers. Don't think for a second that any of the HOPCC pastors are in the dark about what Denis is doing, he will indeed call it "Fault finding," but I call it "Fact finding."

As a member of this church, you must realize that they already know everything that there is about you (once again trying to play the role of God), therefore, a template of scriptures is already laid in place that pertains to the particular individual.

When is the last time your pastor brought someone to church that is actually there after a few months still serving God; far and few. The pastors always give advice on the subject of soul winning, so how come they don't bring the most people? This is the same reason why they will continue to chase people off; because they really don't know what they are doing. Soul winning is 100% love, take that out, and you just have "Winning," but not of souls, of people looking for something that they will never find.

You guys should call it "Soul whining," because that's all the pastors ever do when someone misses one (it's not the end of the world) service. How about this; you as a soul winner couldn't hold your contact against their own will after Sunday morning service, and now you can't find them for the evening service. OOPS! Instant rebuke at the door when you show up for church; do not pass go, do not sit in your pew. The pastor will say, "Where's so and so?" and you as an obedient brother will reply, "Oh sir, after we went to Cici's this afternoon he kept saying he had to get back to the barracks." Pastor will say, (with disdain) "That's why I told you to just bring him back to the home."

Ever notice how most new people don't want to stay the night in the home unless you force them and entice them with breakfast, and good fellowship; they finally they agree to stay after the pastor goes into his “It’s the weekend, noting but drunks there anyway” spew. I guarantee that nothing I say here will be popular with your pastors, or you! If you are a pastor reading this, but then again, nothing you say will be popular to them either. Keep praying, God will work it out brother.....Uh, I think He already has.
